

Even OPEC admits there's a problem

Posted by Heading Out on May 10, 2005 - 8:46am

There is not a lot of joy in seeing it confirmed that we are right. The Algerian oil minister has now commented that OPEC will be unable to meet demand by the fourth quarter of this year. The growth can only be met if countries have put aside adequate stockpiles ahead of time. (From The Gulf Times via the Energy Bulletin)

In this regard, Howard Kurtz column today in the Washington Post, where he points out the trivialities that fill the front pages of our press and television, is, in the circumstances, remarkably appropriate.

Technorati Tags: peak oil, oil

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike 3.0 United States License.