

Jane Jacobs 1916-2006

Posted by Glenn on April 25, 2006 - 1:22pm in The Oil Drum: Local

Topic: Miscellaneous

Tags: jane jacobs, new york, new york city, oil, peak oil, robert mores, urban planning [list all tags]

We will miss you Jane and we will keep fighting for your unique vision of better cities. You helped us realize all the little things that were right in front of us that makes cities great. Your work will be continued by organizations like Transportation Alternatives, Municipal Arts Society, NYC Street Renaissance, Open Plans, and many, many others. Your legacy is found not in what you built, but in what you taught us to preserve. Long after the buildings and highways that Robert Moses built have crumbled, your ideas will still be discussed, talked about and embraced by future generations.

For an interesting taste of Jane Jacobs' wit, intellect and views on oil, see my analysis of her interview with JH Kunstler.

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Share Alike 3.0 United States License.